

Your determination to eliminate restrictions on media ownership in the same area will lead to a dangerous concentration of media ownership. Perhaps you do not believe this is a problem, and perhaps it isn't for you, but for those of us who wish to be informed of the events and decisions that affect our lives and to exercise the duties of citizenship in a republic, your decision will have the inevitable effect of giving us just one or two large corporations as information sources over the air waves and the print media.

I am bitterly opposed to the total deregulation of what is basically a public medium.
